To be or not to be…. Community Theatre?

There seems to be the question I hear repeatedly when attending conventions or festivals. Is the term “community theatre” outdated?

For many outside our knowing circle of community theatre friends, the term sometimes becomes an easy punchline, tossed around as an example of poor-quality theatre.

So, if general usage of the term now suggests that we are somehow regarded less favorably than our capable companies deserve, has the time come to redefine ourselves?

If not community theatre, then what are we?

Many things. We are a place where tomorrow’s stars get their start. We are a safe refuge for young actors to find inclusion and acceptance. We are a resource where experienced directors, musicians, and designers share and showcase their expertise. We are a place where the most mature actors can take a late-in-life chance to step onstage for the very first time. We are a place where people come to escape their “real” lives and practice what they love—the art of live theatre.

A few years ago, my home theatre debuted a world premiere musical. It was a taxing, exhausting, and yet thrilling experience. This same musical was recently produced again for its “professional” world premiere, starring a number of famous Broadway names.

As you can imagine, it was thrilling to have been a step along the way for a Broadway-bound musical. I bought my plane ticket and whisked my way off to support the show and enjoy a new interpretation of the same script. I came home proud of what we had done in comparison to this “professional” theatre. And I can honestly say that our little community theatre had a much stronger production. Maybe it was because in community theatre we work without the constraints of union regulations, or that we can have a longer rehearsal schedule to allow more time for our actors to work with the material, or maybe our tech team had more resources because we are using volunteers. Regardless, our production made me proud. Proud to be called a community theatre!

I have found several definitions for community theatre. All were similar, but here is my favorite from Wikipedia: Community theatre refers to theatrical performance made in relation to particular communities—its usage includes theatre made by, with, and for a community.

By this definition, isn’t every theatre experience community theatre? All theatre draws from and represents the community it serves, whether it be Broadway, NYC, or Bradenton, FL.

The world premiere of an award-winning show is a feather in any theatre's cap.

It's also an exciting process, for a theatre that produces a new play is embarking on an artistic adventure that will energize both the company and its patrons.

With that in mind, AACT is now accepting applications for Producing Theatres for the 2022 NewPlayFest, with a deadline of February 1, 2020. For the application form, go to aact.org/new2022, or contact the AACT office.

NewPlayFest 2022 productions will take place between June 2021 and December 2022. Producing Theatres will be chosen well in advance, to allow them time to schedule the world premiere production as part of their regular season.

AACT will select six member theatres to produce the winning plays selected by a team of AACT reviewers. Producing Theatres will read the scripts that make it to the final round and select the winning shows they will produce.

AACT NewPlayFest plays a vital role in many ways. A theatre that produces a world premiere new play contributes to the future development of that piece, and helps the playwright determine what works or doesn't work. The interpretations of the director and the actors can reveal insights into the work that even the playwright didn't know were there, allowing the playwright to determine what can be done to make the play more effective.

To improve the production process, the end product, and the playwriting experience for both theatre and playwright, AACT has added a workshopping component to this festival cycle. This gives each Producing Theatre the opportunity to receive funds specifically for bringing the playwright to the theatre for workshopping, and to attend the opening night festivities. In addition, funds are also available to help cover production and marketing costs. The Jack K. Ayre and Frank Ayre Lee Theatre Foundation will provide this generous funding.

In keeping with AACT's commitment to advancing the artistic quality and creative process for community theatres and artists, winning plays will once again be published in an anthology by Dramatic Publishing Company.

Submit a Script

Playwrights may submit scripts for AACT NewPlayFest 2022 during May and June 2020. Details for script submission will be available soon at aact.org/newplayfest. Only non-musical, full-length plays will be accepted. In addition, scripts must be unpublished and must not have received a full production. (If selected, the AACT theatre's production is to be a world premiere.) Only one script per playwright will be accepted. There are no fees for AACT-member playwrights; nonmembers will be charged a $10 script processing fee. For more information and script formatting guidelines, visit aact.org/new2022.

Be a Reviewer

Volunteer Reviewers play an important role in AACT NewPlayFest 2020, reading and scoring submitted scripts in several rounds of reviews. If you'd like to be a part of this exciting AACT festival as a Reviewer, you'll find an application form and more information at aact.org/new2022.

Veterans Day honors all of those who have served the country in the United States Armed Forces in war or peace.

AACT honors and thanks the brave men and women who serve and have served our country at home and overseas. We are proud of the partnerships we have built with Army Europe Entertainment to support theatre in the military. We hope that you will take time this Veterans Day to learn more about its history and ways to honor those that served.

Veterans Day was originally called Armistice Day, commemorating the end of World War I.

World War I officially ended when the Treaty of Versailles was signed on June 28, 1919. However, the fighting ended about seven months before that, when the Allies and Germany put into effect an armistice on the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month.

For that reason, Nov. 11, 1918, was largely considered the end of “the war to end all wars” and dubbed Armistice Day. In 1926, Congress officially recognized it as the end of the war, and in 1938, it became an official holiday, primarily a day set aside to honor veterans of World War I.

But then World War II and the Korean War happened, so on June 1, 1954, at the urging of veterans service organizations, Congress amended the commemoration yet again by changing the word “armistice” to “veterans” so the day would honor American veterans of all wars.

This year, the Veterans Day National Ceremony will be held on November 11th at Arlington National Cemetery.

AACT joins in the national salute to all those who have served in this country’s Armed Forces—including AACT members of Army Europe Entertainment, profiled by AACT Region X Representative Dane Winters on the next page.
Army Entertainment -
What? How? Why?
Dane Winters

W

hen I packed my bags to begin working with Army Europe Entertainment, fellow actors (and my agent in the States) first wondered what Army Entertainment was; then, what on earth would I be doing; and, finally, why would I do so.

As a callow young actor, I simply thought of it as a great way to take a short, needed break from acting, and experience life in Europe. However, my “one year” European adventure has become a 33-year career with a program I’ve grown to whole-heartedly believe in and fight for.

To answer the first question, Army Entertainment was founded in 1940 by the U.S. War Department. Army Entertainment once spanned the globe. In 1976, The Washington Post named the program “the largest producing organization of music and theatre in the world,” staging more than 25,000 performances annually, with a global audience of more than 2.5 million people.

As with the rest of the world, much has changed since then. Only seven Entertainment programs remain today, located in Germany, Italy, and Belgium. At each, one or two professionals run community theatre-style programs, supported by thousands of soldier, family member, and civilian volunteers. It remains the only Army Family, Morale, Welfare, and Recreation program that functions with volunteer support. Annually, more than 2,000 volunteers provide hundreds of thousands of hours, putting on shows, which equates to over $3 million in volunteerism given to European military communities.

Many of you will agree, I think, regardless of location, producing theatre is very much like a military exercise.

The mission and history of Army Entertainment can be found at ArmyEuropeEntertainment.com. I recommend checking it out—it is a fascinating story.

As for the second question about what we do, we are simply doing theatre, but in a foreign land. Many of you will agree, I think, regardless of location, producing theatre is very much like a military exercise. As Alan Buxkemper, Stuttgart Theatre Center Director and fellow 32-year Entertainment vet puts it, “Auditions are our ‘Draft,’ if you will. Rehearsals are ‘Basic Training,’ dress rehearsals are ‘Maneuver Exercises,’ and performances are ‘Combat.’ (Hopefully, lethality is kept to a minimum, though!)”

A show brings together people with wildly different levels of experience, talent, skill, and age in pursuit of a common goal—or mission. Buxkemper continues, “You create a battle plan, train like crazy, and then pull it off seamlessly with no apparent effort. Sounds like theatre, doesn’t it?”

As to concerned friends’ (and my agent’s) final question, “Why on earth” would I leave a career and stay 33 years? The continued on next page reason my colleagues and I devote our professional lives to this program is because we have seen, first-hand, the impact that theatre has on soldiers, civilians, and family members, not to mention an entire community.

We have testimonials from soldiers (some suffering from PTSD), emphatically stating the program saved their minds, careers, marriages, families, and lives. Some of those soldiers and family members have gone on to life-long theatre avocations or even professional careers—including a Tony Award-winner.

"Parents, children, and often entire families develop new bonds and increase closeness by working on a show."

Vikki Hanrahan, another 30+ year Entertainment Director, at Ansbach’s Terrace Playhouse says, “Soldiers find a safe, nurturing, and creative environment where they can briefly escape the daily stress of military service. They discover alternatives to negative behaviors like drinking, drugs, and endless video games in the barracks. Their sense of isolation in a foreign country decreases. They find friends, and often ‘families,’ to take the place of the ones they left behind.”

Among the biggest beneficiaries of Army Entertainment are youth and families. As Jerry Brees, director of the Soldiers Theatre in Vicenza, Italy, explains, “Parents, children, and often entire families develop new bonds and increase closeness by working on a show. Many U.S. military schools in Europe don’t have theatre programs. Our theatres fill a vital gap in youths’ education and experience. Kids interact with a wide variety of ages and backgrounds while growing stronger emotionally, and becoming more self-confident. And parents know they are in a safe place.”

Brees emphasizes that “Soldiers and families can’t simply walk off base and find an English-speaking theatre to visit or be part of. We provide something important they were each sacrificing in order to serve our country overseas.”

As with any arts organization, especially in today’s environment, the sword of Damocles hovers in the budgetary wings. However, my fellow Army Entertainment Directors and I are committed to continuing the 70-year-old mission to support soldiers, families, and youth the best way we know how—creating community by putting on theatre.

Dane Winters is the IMCOM (Installation Management Command Europe) Entertainment Program Manager. He received his MFA in Acting/Design at the Dallas Theater Center from Trinity University in 1984. In 1986, Dane moved to Bamberg, Germany as a U.S. Army Entertainment Music Specialist. He went on to serve as the Stuttgart Theater Center Director from 1988–1998, the Stuttgart Entertainment Branch Director from 1998–2000, and Entertainment Director at the Heidelberg Roadside Theater from 2000–2012. Dane became the Europe Region Program Manager in 2012, is located in Kaiserslautern, Germany, and oversees and supports military theatres across Europe. Dane received numerous TÖPPER Awards (U.S. Army Entertainment Europe Tournament of Plays) and U.S. Army Festival of the Arts Awards for his directing, design, and technical direction. He has received the AACT David Bryant Outstanding Service Award, the U.S. Army James T. Martin Award for life-time service, and numerous U.S. Army commendations.
AACT National Awards are presented each year in recognition of outstanding contributions to community theatre. The 2020 National Awards will be presented at aactWorldFest 2020 in Venice, Florida, in June. Nominations open November 4 and are accepted for persons of all ages. The submission deadline is January 20, 2020.

Visit aact.org/national-awards to submit a nomination. The same page also offers a list of AACT National Awards with descriptions, links to see who has received Awards in the past, and a link to the National Award Nomination Form.

Spotlight Award Nominations

Nominations are welcome anytime for the AACT Spotlight Award, which is presented locally by AACT and an AACT-member theatre in recognition for long or special service that has had a significant impact on the quality of local theatre. Nominations are accepted for persons of all ages. For more detail and to submit a Spotlight Award Nomination visit aact.org/spotlight-award.

Old Florida rivers and creeks are just a few miles away. On a boat ride down the Myakka River you will most likely encounter alligators and manatees along the way.

If you’re a golfer, there are many courses to choose from, including the championship Plantation Golf and Country Club courses, where the Ladies PGA Q-school tournament is held. Deep-sea fishing, canoeing, kayaking, parasailing, biking, and bird watching are also popular pastimes in this paradise on the Gulf.

Clearly, you’ll find lots to do in Venice. And just north is Sarasota, consistently hailed as one of the nation’s top-five cities for the arts, with a wide variety of local theatre, Broadway shows, ballet, and orchestra performances, art galleries, and local flavor (such as the world-famous Selby Botanical Gardens, the Ringling Art Museum, and Historic Spanish Point) to enjoy.
But wait—there's more! Tampa Bay Rays major league baseball games are just an hour away, and Busch Gardens Amusement Park and Zoological Gardens are 75 minutes away. If you're a Disney fan, one more hour will get you to Walt Disney World, Universal Studios, and SeaWorld. You can also drive to the Florida Everglades, Kennedy Space Center, and much, much more.

Come to aactWorldFest early, and stay a few days after. Enjoy all of Florida, the Sunshine State! You'll be glad you did.

Festival registration and more information about the area is available online at venicetheatre.org/international. ♦

Stroll down Venice Avenue with its pink, Italian Renaissance buildings, Mediterranean-style shops and "umbrella-topped" Canary Island date palms. Dozens of restaurants, bars, and shops await you. The shops are as eclectic as the restaurants, and they all look forward to serving you!
Thanksgiving? Christmas? Hanukkah? Kwanzaa? All are coming sooner than you would like to believe. And for those of us in the nonprofit world, year-end holiday time means fundraising. Or it used to. With new tax laws, the year-end plea has taken on a whole new complexion. Many organizations are opting out of the year-end request, and trying new approaches. However, you shouldn’t give this tried-and-true method a pass without serious consideration. The year-end campaign can bring you closer to your donors, but you must start planning now.

During the mellow holiday season, full of good cheer, you have the perfect opportunity to tell your organization’s story. Patrons want and need to know what you have done with donations—and being in the theatre business, nobody can tell a story like you. Your story should focus on your theatre’s mission and how the donor’s contribution can help make that mission a reality. Pictures and videos on social media can reaffirm a donor’s belief in your theatre, while new patrons are introduced to current or upcoming projects and programs.

Telling your story can be as easy as a postcard highlighting achievements, ongoing programs, or discussing future planning, or an open house prior to your holiday production. Tell donors how much they mean to the organization. and remind them they are part of the story of the theatre. Their commitment to your organization is what puts “community” into community theatre.

Donor relationships are the cornerstone of effective fundraising, and holidays create a perfect time for building, stabilizing, or beginning those relationships through the stories you are telling.

No matter the size of the organization, a development plan is essential, and part of the plan should be the end-of-the-year campaign goal. Setting a goal helps you measure and achieve success. Keep donors in the loop, and you create energy and maintain excitement as you move toward your goal.

Never forget that giving is personal, not a tax benefit. However, note that, due to recent tax law changes, donors may choose to give to you differently than before.

First, determine who you are going to target for your campaign. Because you have set a goal, you should be able to determine who best will benefit from your “theatre story.” For example, if you are looking to renovate theatre classrooms, the target of your messaging would be past students and parents of current ones.
Once you’ve determined your targets, set up a campaign calendar. By determining a beginning and ending date for the year-end request, you can plan mailings, social media, and marketing. Because you know your target audience, how you reach them is easier to define. Many communities are tying into “Giving Tuesday” and other “Big Give” funding mechanisms. If these are available to you, do not hesitate to jump on the band wagon—they can help you set up your campaign timetable.

Plan for what happens after December 31. How are you going to continue the momentum?

Never forget that giving is personal, not a tax benefit. However, note that, due to recent tax law changes, donors may choose to give to you differently than before. You may find some want to give a larger amount at one time that would otherwise represent several years’ donation. For example, Mr. Donorman gives you $5,000, instead of his usual $1,000 gift—but, for the next four years he will not donate. This enables him to take an itemized tax deduction. Understanding how the tax laws will affect you, and treating donors in a consistent manner, is key to maintaining an even keel while negotiating these often uncharted waters.

Finally, plan for what happens after December 31. How are you going to continue the momentum? Go back to your development plan and assess the success and failure of your goals and objectives. Remember your development plan is about development: Developing your relationships with donors, developing your relationships with the community, developing staff and volunteer, and developing the image your theatre projects.

Through strong relationships and captivating stories, you will be successful.

Kristi Quinn has been active in community theatre for over twenty years. Formerly the AACT VP Festivals, Kristi served for six years as the Region V Representative on the AACT Board. She serves as a member of the Finance and Advocacy Committees of AACT. She also served as a board member of the Nebraska Association of Community Theatre. Her theatre experience includes acting, directing, set decoration, and costume design, as well as public relations, grant writing, and development. She has been employed as Executive Director of the Sioux City Community Theatre, Development Director of the Sioux City Art Center, and Executive Director of Susan G. Komen Siouxland. Kristi resides in Dakota City, Nebraska.
AACTFest 2021 Is on the Horizon

Mark your calendar for June 14-19, 2021—the dates for AACTFest 2021, AACT’s national theatre festival.

The location is downtown Louisville, Kentucky, with AACTFest National Companies performing at the Kentucky Center for the Performing Arts. This state-of-the-art theatre center is home to Louisville’s nationally-renowned arts scene, including the Louisville Orchestra, Kentucky Opera, Louisville Ballet, Stage One Family Theatre, and PNC Bank Broadway, as well as a host of community theatres and the Kentucky Center Presents performances. The Center’s three theatres, along with their sister facility, the elegant W. L. Lyons Brown Theatre, are Kentucky’s showcases for the performing arts. From Broadway to ballet, from blues to bluegrass, from big bands to Beethoven, these stages overflow with magnificent entertainment almost every night of the year.

The Hyatt Regency Downtown will serve as the festival host hotel, with special discounted rates available to festival attendees. It will also will be the location for AACTFest special events, workshops, exhibits, and conferences. This 4-star hotel is within walking distance of Actors Theatre of Louisville and the Kentucky Center for the Performing Arts. With a stay at Hyatt Regency Louisville, you will be centrally located in Louisville and just steps from the Fourth Street Live District. A trolley will be available to transport those staying at the hotel to the festival theatre. Additional host hotels will be announced soon. Please consider staying at one of the designated host hotels, as this makes it possible for AACT to provide the great discounts, services, and experiences offered during the festival.

AACT is excited to be hosting the next festival in such a vibrant and arts-friendly city with world-class restaurants, tourist attractions and museums, dozens of venues and performance companies, and rich in history! More information about the festival will be posted on the AACT website soon (aact.org/21).

—Ed Heffestel, West Union Area Community Theatre, IA
The 20th biennial National Community Theatre Directors Conference, on the campus of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, attracted such a robust number of attendees that registrations were closed in early October. This reflects “the highest registration numbers on record,” according to AACT Executive Director Quiana Clark-Roland.

The three-day conference brings together those employed full-time in an administrative and/or artistic position in a community theatre. Attendees learn about other’s theatre operations, share stories of challenges and solutions, and meet and create lasting collaborations with colleagues from around the country.

“The value of this conference is tremendous,” says Jon Douglas Rake, of the Tacoma Musical Playhouse in Tacoma, Washington. “Theatre managers share challenges from their home theatres, and issues range from boards of directors and staff to production values, marketing, facility, ticket pricing, and volunteers. Managers from small-scale theatres as well as multi-million-dollar budget theatres attend. It is a place to share and a place to learn. It is also a place to catch up on friendships.”

Sarah Phoenix, Artistic Director of Theatre Tulsa in Tulsa, Oklahoma, agrees: “The most important part of attending the conference is talking to others who do what I do, and who understand the unique nature of our roles. We build relationships of friendship, support, and networking, and meet people who are willing to provide advice with productions and help trouble-shoot problems.”

This year, for the first time, the conference is open to observers—those not in a full-time administrative or artistic position. Observers have access to all meals, social events, and resources shared during the conference. And while participation in discussions is limited to those registered as full-time directors (unless facilitators warrant otherwise), observing is seen as an opportunity to learn from the discussions and networking opportunities.
The conference once again benefits from the seasoned facilitation of John Viars, who has served in that role for three decades. He is the recently retired Executive Director of the Des Moines Playhouse, and a past president of AACT. A recipient of international achievement, outstanding service, and lifetime achievement awards, John has been employed professionally in community and educational theatre for over 45 years. He holds both a BA and MA in theatre from Case Western Reserve University.

The conference, produced by AACT, and sponsored by the University of Wisconsin-Madison, is being held at its original home at the Lowell Center on the UW-Madison campus. Registration included an opening night reception, all conference materials, lunches for two days, and the MTI-sponsored Cocktail Hour and Trivia Game.

The biennial Conference will be held again in November 2021. Details will be available at aact.org/ctdc. Dates and location to be announced. We recommend registering early, as the conference continues to be more and more popular.

I can still recall—vividly—the board meeting where I pleaded to abolish our theatre’s misuse of cartoon clip-art advertising and questionable graphics (Getty Images watermarks, and all).

Such tales of marketing mayhem weren’t lost on my fellow attendees at the AACT TEAMS Conference at the Hale Theatre in Salt Lake City this past August. We’d all been there at some point in our careers. And now we were here in Salt Lake—and thankfully. After all, where else could we collaborate as like-minded thespians and theatre geeks? Who else could comprehend the frustrations that sometimes fester from the true grit of community theatre? And how do we reach younger demographics more effectively?

I currently serve as the Media and Public Relations Director for the Actors’ Repertory Theatre of Idaho in Idaho Falls, Idaho (indeed, that’s a lot of Idaho). I went to the TEAMS Conference (along with my Board Vice President, Megan Gazda), for a revitalizing three-day quest for community theatre marketing and development skills.

Joining us was an all-American gaggle of theatre representatives from Iowa, California, Florida, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Oregon, New England, Idaho and Texas—all with a yearning for learning. Once conversations began to flow, the relatability among us was uncanny.

In my case, within the Marketing Track (see more about tracks below), we shared tales of long-winded pre-curtain speeches, impossible-to-please patrons, decreasing volunteer retention rates, ROI’s, failed dynamic pricing, and the inevitable late program bio from that one cast member. Yes Bubba, we’ve all been there.

More importantly, we shared innovative marketing strategies with one another that would impress any Mark Cubans of our generation. We talked about award ceremonies for volunteers, parties to nominate unforgettable faux pas of the season, membership tiers for patrons, press nights, drink pre-orders, and 30-second introduction videos to replace those pre-curtain speeches we’d all been venting about. These were the proper tools to counteract any community theatre marketing mishaps.

People here understand. They know. I found the unanimous synergism everywhere at the AACT TEAMS Conference was like the goosebumps you feel when you hear your favorite song, or watch a performance you’ve been waiting your entire adult life to see. It doesn’t get much better than that.
The AACT TEAMS Conference is a multi-tracked program, and I found that my experience was repeated for attendees in each category represented by the TEAMS acronym, as explained by AACT:

1. Theatrical Theatre – “Learn to master the challenges you face as you work within the amenities of your theatre, from stage size, lighting systems, and scenery, to costumes.”

2. Educational Programming – “The Educational Programming track will give you skills to tackle theatre education issues, a renewed enthusiasm to build your educational programs, and provide you with a network of colleagues from all over the country.”

3. Artistic Direction/Vision – “Choose the right plays for your next season; learn solutions for choosing directors, recruiting actors, and solving technical problems; and examine long-range planning.”

4. Marketing/Development Skills – “Discover strategies and tactics to increase your fundraising and marketing abilities, and learn ways to create loyalty to your organization and promote its place in your community.”

5. Stage Management Skills – “For new and experienced stage managers, and those who are interested in taking on that important role, as well as directors, producers, or volunteer coordinators looking to establish or improve their theatre’s stage management program.”

Note that each track is its own three-day course, taught separately from the rest. Consequentially, attending more than one track would require multiple representatives from your organization, or waiting until the next year to take part in other portions of the conference yourself. Either way, it’s worth it. My only frustration was not being able to attend all of them at the same time.

Ultimately, I found that sharing stories, problems, and solutions made for a memorable and mind-stretching experience. The TEAMS Conference helped us all to unravel the underlying messages within our shared experiences—and the potential for growth they contain. We came away equipped with the tools to succeed—with the help of the right people, a positive attitude, and a complete absence of watermarked cartoon clip-art. ♦

Spotlight Award Honors Dan Sheehan

The AACT Spotlight Award partners AACT with theatres to recognize individuals and organizations for long or special service that has had a significant impact on the quality of their local theatres. Any AACT member theatre may apply to present the Spotlight Award.

The Walpole (MA) Footlighters honored Daniel Sheehan with the AACT Spotlight Award, on Sunday, June 9, 2019. The award was presented by Board Member Marianne Phinney at The Footlighters' annual meeting.

Dan Sheehan joined The Walpole Footlighters in 1990, and has served as Technical Director for over 20 years. His many talents include set, sound, and lighting design, as well as stage “gimmicks.” Dan is the theatre’s go-to guy for almost everything, one who signs his bio as: “Fixer of Things that Break.” When a challenge arises, Dan always finds a clever and practical solution.

His creativity and technical expertise have enabled The Walpole Footlighters to stage technically difficulty shows, like Something’s Afoot, with 10 “lethal” gimmicks, Flemming, with multiple concealed entrances, and Blithe Spirit, featuring a center-stage dancing armchair. Dan accommodates any of the backstage, last minute, or on-the-spot needs of the cast and stage crew. The Footlighters depend on Dan to make things right, and help its production teams achieve their artistic vision.

As stated in the theatre’s newsletter, “Dan’s attention to detail creates a ‘world’ on the stage, wowing both actors and the audience.”

Southeastern Theatre Conference
70th Annual Convention
Feb. 26 – March 1, 2020
Louisville, Keentucky

Each year, the Southeastern Theatre Conference invites theatre lovers of all kinds — actors, singers, dancers, designers, technicians, stage managers, directors, playwrights, teachers, students, professionals, academicians, etc. — to gather together in celebration of the art of theatre. The annual SETC Convention brings over 5,000 members of our theatre community together for three and a half days of workshops, keynotes, performance festivals, auditions, college recruiting, job interviews, and more.

Early-Bird Registration Deadline: Dec. 13, 2019 @ Noon ET Online Registration Deadline: Jan. 22, 2020 @ Noon ET

As part of the convention, each year, the Ten-Minute Play Festival is open to all SETC Convention attendees, no matter age or affiliation. All you have to do is apply and be ready to create and produce a production within 24 hours. 2020 applications will be available as part of the online convention registration process.

How the Ten-Minute Play Festival Works:
• Actors perform audition monologues
• Playwrights work throughout the night to create their plays
• The next morning, directors select a completed script and choose the actors
• Groups work together to rehearse and stage their plays
The Ten-Minute Play Festival culminates in an evening of public performances followed by a response session.

Advocacy is educating and informing elected officials, the public, and the media about the importance and value of your community theatre.

Officeholders have a lot of responsibility and tackle a wide variety of legislative issues. Many never consider going to a local performance or meeting with arts organization officials.

Introduce your organization to elected officials
• Communicate your interest in working together in the future, typically with a short written letter.
• Submit a packet of organizational materials: brief background information (include your mission statement), season brochure, promotional poster, and calendar. Include outreach and educational programs, economic impact studies, fact sheets on relevant issues, newsletters, etc. Update this packet once a year.
• Place the legislator on your press list, and get on his/her press list
• Request a meeting at the legislator’s office to discuss your organization, its current situation, future plans, and issues of concern.

It is up to you—performing artists, administrators, and audience members—to explain the value of the performing arts to lawmakers.

Artie's Advocacy Tip
Happy Holidays from Your Insurance Friends

Grice King

I know that some of you out there don’t really know us very well. After all, we are fairly new to AACT. But we’re not new to insurance, not new to business, and definitely not new to theatre. My wife, kids, father-in-law (Ken Roberts with USI), mother-in-law, and my mother when she was younger, all have participated in community theatre. As for me, I am not much of a performer, and am genuinely terrified at the thought of being on stage in front of large groups (My palms and forehead suddenly got a bit clammy just thinking about it.) That’s why I can’t tell you enough just how much I respect those of you who do perform.

In our small community of Gainesville, Texas, we have two great venues for theatre. One is Butterfield Stage, which has presented about every major theatrical production for adults and children in its 40 years. The other is North Central Texas College (NCTC), whose drama department puts on regular performances in its newly-built performing arts center. Earlier in June, my wife, Nikki, was in the NCTC production of Little Shop of Horrors. It was her NCTC debut, so this was an exciting experience for her and our family. She played a Skid Row urchin, a radio interviewer, and the fabulous Mrs. Luce. She even got to ride a bike across stage!

Our daughters were fascinated by the show and wanted to figure out all the nuances behind productions of that scale. Our youngest, who is six, bebopped around the house singing “They say the meek shall inherit…” for weeks, and it escalated from there. All three of our girls went to multiple performances, and will definitely be future thespians. The boys are harder to figure out, as young boys are, but they walked away from the show grinning from ear to ear. As for me, I am amazed how well a show like this can come together. It was a wonderful performance, Nikki’s stage presence was awe-inspiring, and our kids even got to take pictures with the infamous Audrey 2!

Theatre is so much fun, as you all know, but every time I watch one of these fabulous performances, I am reminded just how much work from everyone goes into making us laugh, cry, or sit up straight in our seat.

I wish everyone the happiest of holidays from my family to yours. Break a leg out there, and continue to make millions of people happy across this great country.

AACT Web Power

If your theatre plans to file for federal nonprofit status—or if you simply want to brush up on nonprofit law and regulations—there’s no better place to begin than the AACT website.

You’ll find a step-by-step explanation of the process, how to begin, and how to create a successful application. There’s further help with links to specific IRS publications and forms, an overview of filing requirements, and information on developing or updating your organization’s articles of incorporation, bylaws, and other documents you may need to provide.

The process may be complex, but the information provided on the AACT website will get you started in the right direction, so there are fewer surprises, and more certainty of a successful application. Visit aact.org/nonprofit (or, on the site’s drop-down menu, go to Making Theatre, then Management).
